COVID-19 Q & A of the Day

Question: What is considered a probable case and a probable death of COVID-19?

Answer: A person with a probable case of COVID-19 has not had a confirmatory test but is experiencing symptoms of COVID-19 and has had direct contact with a person with a confirmed case of COVID-19.

From a data reporting standpoint, absent a confirmatory test, a probable death from COVID-19 is when a death certificate (issued by a coroner or medical examiner) lists COVID-19 or SARS-CoV-2 infection as the cause of death or a contributing factor to death. Reports to CDC of COVID-19 probable deaths generally come from death certificates. The time frame for certifying deaths and sending the information to CDC varies from state to state.
